Three days into her university career Mary Kathleen Hickox has some worries, but paying her tuition isn't one of them.

The Charlottetown Rural graduate is one of this year's $60,000 Schulich Leader Scholarship winners.

"It's such a weight off my shoulders," said Hickox.

"it also makes me very excited for the future. Because now continuing my education after achieving my undergraduate degree is even more attainable for me."

Hickox is enrolled in the science program at Queen's University, and the scholarship has her looking past her undergraduate years..

"The impact that has on me continuing my education and the impact it will have on my whole life is just astounding," she said.

Fifty students across the country are hand-picked for the award. Queen's was quick to tweet Hickox's arrival on campus, where she'll be studying human sciences and biology.
